street, Boston, is as well satis fed as Wall street, New York, that it knows all that is to be known in regard to inancial questions. To all men whoever wherever they may be who repudiate oston notions Beacon street says by its I am holier than you." It forgets that the conservatism of the South on almost every question has been the salvation of the country from many other things besides Know-Nothingism. It forgets that here in Virginia in 1878 Greenbackism recoived a blow from which that delusion has never recovered. It forgets Mr. Lincoln's "One man cannot be as wise as all men "-that is, Beacon street cannot be as wise as all the statesmen and financiers whom it tries to whistle down the wind. Even that excellent journal the Boston Daily Herald deems it not improper nor presemly to undertake to enlighten the advocates of the free coinage of silver as to the "delusion" under which they are laboring. In doing so, it begins with the horn-book of finance. In fact, it is amusing to see the patronizing air with which the

not mention it in the following paragraph: not mention it in the following paragraph:

"The notion that there is some mysterious power and value in money, over and above its quality as a medium of exchange, is one into which ignorant and semi-educated men are exceedingly liable to fall. For it is easy for any one who has made a reasonable study of this subject to comprehend that if we had a gold or silver currency represented by billions of dollars, or if we had a paper currency of the same extensive character it would in no way improve our condithe same extensive character it would in no way improve our condition, but tend, on the contrary, to make it worse, because much more uncertain. The true capital, the true wealth of a country is not and cannot be its money, for we should be nearly as wealthy as we now are if every dollar of gold, silver, and paper money was entirely destroyed. The effect of such a destruction would merely be to force us to use some other token in carrying on an exchange of wealth or services, which almost alone constitute or produce wealth."

Herald preaches common-places to the advocates of the free-coinage bill. However, although it has that bill in mind it does

Our Virginia statesmen understand these things. They know that there are numerous maccountable things and insolvable proms involved in the money question. Who would believe that in 1850 the entire paper circulating medium of the United States amounted only to some two hundred llions of dollars? Who would believe that Virginia had more banking capital in 1860 than she has now? Who would believe that Richmond had more banking capital when she had only forty thousand itants than she can boast of now, when she has nearly a hundred thousand inhabitants? Who can tell how often the to show its circulating power ability to settle indebtednesses? true that this is an nt of the financial or currency prothe calculations of the theorists? The Herald evidently regards money as nothing more that a measure of values. But isn't it something more? That paper probably ds that as in a right-angled triangle the square of the hypothenuse is equal to the sum of the squares of the other two sides. so the property of the world will increase in nominal value in proportion as the amount of the currency is increased. The hypothenuse is represented by the property and the other two sides by the amount of currency and the frequency of its use. That is to say, the money of the world will always buy all the property of the world. The price of property will rise and fall with the increase and decrease of the sum total of the currency. This is what the Herald means when it speaks of a currency of "billions of dollars" as no better than a currency of say fifteen hundred millions of dollars. This, we take it, is not yet a settled question. When we recollect that according to the books of a hundred banks in the large cities nearly all the debts were settled with but little gold, silver, or paperless than 2 per cent. of all, we think—we must conclude that bank-checks play an important part in the currency problem.

It is because there are so many unsettled problems in finance that we are willing to see tried the experiment of free coinage.

The Connection Track

There was a time when the Virginia Legislature and the people of Richmond ught it good policy to compel railroad passengers to travel across this city in hacksand omnibuses. John B. Florp was a member of the Legislature in those days and excoriated the advocates of this idea which he termed 'the shaved-tail mule policy.' But we have outgrown the delusion at the bottom of that policy. And the City Coun-cil will, we take it, refuse to return to it. It is too late to obstruct travel as a means of compelling the traveller to spend his money where he does not desire to spend

In a word, we must open our gates to the passengers who wish to use our streets highways. Let us continue to be "hos-sitable Richmond."

Railroad-men whose judgment is to b sted express the opinion that when hmond has grown to the proportions which are the promise of the next few years its great passenger depôt will have to be located near the head of west Broad street. This seems to be the logic of the Belt lines-of that which the Atlantic-Beil lines—or that which the Atlantic-Coast Line is now completing and of that which the Chesapeake and Ohio proposes to build to connect the Richmond and Al-leghany track and the Peninsula division ath its main stem running from Richmond sville, Charlottesville, Staunton, Meanwhile we must content ourselves ith present track arrangements in the

The number of freight trains which were no over the connection track at night, rought upon that route two years ago t unpopularity and the consequence inance requiring the company after given date to cease using steam the tracks laid in the streets. This was intended to drive the care from the connection track, for on it are grades, purves, and trestles, which make it im-practicable to use horses to draw the trains, and to do it by electric power would be ex-cessively costly, if not altogether imprac-ticable. Under the compulsion of this ordi-nance the Richmond and Fredericksburg the Best Line will be ready to receive both the freight and passenger trains, but the well verified, of depisted oyster-beds and uplie has made up its mind that to force in the laws do not impoverished oystermen. The laws do not oyster-culture. be passenger trains over that route will be o "side-track" Richmond in a way that will be very damaging to our interests.

Whether the through trains from the Worth, after being run into Chesterfield it?

Whether the through Manchester and into the Byrd-Street station, or are halted it?

in Chesterfield, "while a "shoo-fly" train ects them with this city, our interests will suffer, and the general travelling public would curse the delay and stand amazed at the folly of Richmond.

Of all these things our business-men have been thinking for a year or more. Their conclusion is that we cannot afford to thrust the passenger trains out of the city. The general voice is for their remaining where they are. There is a great convenience in being able to debark at Elba station. Passing Monroe Park strangers are given a beautiful glimpse of our city, and it is a great advertisement for us. The value of property on Belvidere and other such streets seems not to have been injurisously affected. It is worth many times more now than when the track was put there, but of course we will not attempt to there, but of course we will not attempt to the Speaker of the House of Delegates to canvass the votes for Governor. It issued a mandamus commanding him to do so. This is in contrast with the action or nonaction of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire, and is a queer way of keeping sparate and independent of one another the three departments of the Government the Legislative, the Executive, and Judicial. The Nebraska case is not exactly the same as was the New Hampshire case. The mandamus was addressed to the Speaker, not to the House of Delegates. But suppose the Speaker had been arrested? or the House had resolved to adjourn and leave the votes uncanvassed? What would the court have done? What could it have done? Would the court have reversed CROMWELL's act and walked down the aisle and commanded the members to keep their seats? Hardly. Surely these be parlous times.

Cleveland and the Press

The Petersburg Index-Appeal objects to the way Mr. CLEVELAND is working to keep imself before the public, and says his plan of campaign for a third nomination for the presidency is economical and ingenious, if not unique."

This refers to the fact that Mr. CLEVE-LAND accepts numerous invitations to speak at banquets, and always "obligingly furnishes the press associations with printed copies of his speeches in advance."

For our part we print his speeches, not be cause he wishes them printed, but because the public desires to read them. No other man in this country commands as much attention.

We sincerely hope, however, that if re-elected President, Mr. CLEVELAND will continue to be as considerate of the press as he is now.

Virginia, North Carolina, and Chicago. Governor Fowle recommends that $25,-000 be appropriated so that North Carolina may be properly represented by the exhibition of her products at the Chicago Exposition. It will be money well spent.

We are urging Virginia to vote a suitable sum for a like purpose, and it will be easier to get the appropriation throu North Carolina to encourage us. What is osition to be a reproduction, except as to size, of our State Capitol. The farmers, who above all others interested in securing immigrants for the State, should forward this appropriation by all the means in their power. We lost all the benefits of the Philadelphia Exposition. Let us be wiser now.

Monsieur Tonson Come Again. The West Virginia Legislature will mee next week. And so here of course comes Monsieur Torson with the announcement that the West Virginia debt question will come up in that body for consideration. For years we have on occasions warned all concerned that West Virginia will never pay one third, one tenth, one twentieth nor one one-hundredth part of that debt, She does not acknowledge that she owes any of it. All the same, whenever the Virginia Legislature or the West Virginia Legislature is about to assemble the holders of West Virginia certificates get into the papers just such a telegram as the one which we are now writing about.

The Washington Postsays that Governo HILL's message does not read as if it were written by a man who is running for a third term.

But the most striking feature of that me sage, and of all the State papers emanating from the same source, is that the writer of them expresses his opinion fearlessly on every question that comes before him for consideration. There are but few public men who are so outspoken. Governor HILL can compare records even with Mr.

Whatever inconveniences the residents on the immediate line of the connection track have suffered will be in great measure removed when the freight trains go. The more the people think of it, the more unwilling they will be to drive the passenger trains from the city. The more we think of it, the greater appears the convenience of the Elba stop.

ing letter of regret to the Democratic Association of Philadelphia from Albany, N. Y.:

I regret that my engagements will deprive me of the pleasure of accepting your cordial invitation to be present at the annual banquet of the Young Men's Democratic Association on January 8th.

The celebration of Jackson's Day, although associated particularly with a military achievement, must always recall the distinguished services that that great Democrat rendered to his country. He was a typical man of the people—setting his face against governmental favoritism, extravagance, and centralization—and for this reason his fellow-citizens honored him with the highest gift within their disposal. Jacksonian Democracy has become a proverb. Its quality was unstrained; it was vigorous, bold, and aggressive; it needed no defence, because it sprang from genuine Americanism; it was its own platform—broad, comprehensive and popular; it was the ceaseless foe, not of one, but of all government abuses; it was manly, robust, and wholesome.

These are the qualities which should characterize Democratic leadership to-day. The same departures from fundamental principles of government which Jackson combated so successfully are visible now to an even greater degree. The iniquitous force bill now pending in Congress is one evidence of them, wasted surplus is another, the McKinley law is another, the recent monetary legislation is another, and the proposed legislative benefactions in the shape of subsidies and bounties are still another. The preservation of our institutions in their simplicity and our country's best welfare demand the

The State Fair.

A fair in Richmond this fall will be all A fair in Richmond this fall will be all right, but we think the great exposition which has been spoken of should be postponed until the fall of 1882. Then the various counties throughout the State might be induced to send an exhibit to Richmond to be exhibited there for a time and afterwards removed to Chicago and displayed at the World's Fair under the auspices of the State as a Virginia exhibit.

We have talked with President W. T. Sutherlin of this matter and that is his view. Virginia should by all means have a splendid exhibit at the World's Fair, and we believe that the best way to secure it is a splendid exhibit at the world's Fair, and we believe that the best way to secure it is to have a State exposition in Richmond in the fall of 1892, and then transfer the ex-hibition to Chicago."

Senator Faulkner, of West Virginia, says the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, has been more or less annoyed by a few of his constituents who insist that he should take a more active part in the debates, and he is continually urged to make a set speech against the force bill. Such suggestions do Senator Faulkner great injustice, and his work on the Democratic side of the Senate is far more effective than a dozen or more set speeches. His duties as "whip" and executive officer of the Democratic party in the Senate are not only responsible but onerous, and his associates fully appreciate his value. He is a ready and effective debater, in addition to being remarkably gifted as a manager. Several times he has obtained the floor to deliver a well-seasoned speech, but each time he has relieded to other the weather way were Senator Faulkner's Effective Work. Several times he has obtained the floor to deliver a well-seasoned speech, but each time he has yielded to others who were more anxious to be heard. On one occasion he relinquished the floor to Senator Stewart, of Nevada, who made a vigorous attack upon the force bill. West Virginians need not give themselves any uneasiness about Senator Faulkner, as he is generally regarded as one of the most valuable members of the minority.

The Rev. Mr. Macqueary's Defence.

The second day's session of the ecclesiastical court which is sitting at Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, O., for the purpose of judging whether Rev. Howard Macqueary is a heretic, was opened at 10 o'clook Thursday morning, Mr. Macqueary was soon upon his feet and continued until almost noon in speaking in his own defence. He devoted himself altogether to his position on the question of Christ's resurrection. He held that it was spiritual and not physical. Referring to the court, he declared that he appreciated its embarrassment. If it decided for him the Church would cry out against it; if it decided against him the intelligent world would criticise it.

Dr. Bates, of St. Paul's, the prosecutor, demed that, the court was one for the next century, but would deal fairly with the end in view that the present was to be served.

Danville, Va., January 9.—Judge Berryman Green, counsel for the administrator of W. H. Trowbridge, raised a most interesting point in the Hustings Court here to-day. It will be remembered that Mr. Trowbridge, a prominent tobacconist, was struck by an electric street-car and received injuries from which he afterwards died. His administrator brought suit against the company for $6,000 damages In his argument to-day Judge Green attacked the charter of the street-car compeny and held that as the charter was not legal the company was a trespasser upon the streets of the city.

THE LONG SAMBO TRESTLE AFIRE. Canadian Dies in Lynchburg.

[Special telegram to the Dispatch.] Incherge. Va., January 9.—The long Sambo trestle on the Richmond and Danville road, twenty-two miles south of this city, caught fire about 12 o'clock last night and two spans were badly damaged before the flames were extinguished. A bridge crew were immediately sent out and trains on the road were detained only a few hours. A LONG WALK.

An unknown man and woman arrived bere this morning on the early Norfolk and Western train, and after stepping into the depot inquired how far it was to Charlottesville. They were told sixty miles, and after being shown the right direction they started. They intended to walk there. They were both well-dressed and apparently educated people. DIED FROM PNEUMONIA.

Edward Hickson, a prominent merchant of Toronto, Can., and who has been visiting his brother near this city since Christmas, died last night from pneumonia. He had been travelling some time through the South for his health.

Robert W. Crenshaw, one of the most prominent citizens of this city, is lying critically ill with pneumonia. IT IS STATED.

It is stated here to-night that nearly the nure amount of $100,000 had been sub-cribed by capitalists to build a large hotel.

NORPOLE, January 9, 1891. The prospect does not now seem very bright for going ahead with the extensive improvements contemplated on the Dismal-Swamp canal route. The new company issued, it is said, pearly a million dollars in bonds, but owing to the disorganized condition of the money market could not realize on them, and those familiar with the outlook seem to think the property will again revert to the receiver of the Exchange National Bank. The Dismal-Swamp canal passes through a very productive section in two States and there is no denying the fact that if widened and deepened it would rapidly become an important commercial highway between Chesapeake bay and the Carolina sounds.

The new United States revenue-cutter Winona, just from the ship-yard at Wilmington, Del., and ordered to the Newberne station, left this morning for her destination. She is a handsome ship.

A party of Maryland capitalists from the Hagerstown section, headed by Colonel H. Kyd Douglass, have been here for two days inspecting the improvements and business outlook of this section, and leave for home to night. They are largely interested in to-night. They are largely interested in lands on the Portsmouth side of the river opposite West Norfolk and known as Port

MANUFACTURING PLANTS.

By the report made by Captain Robert Knox, who has been gathering statistics of the industries of this city for the Board of Trade, it appears that Alexandria has over 200 manufacturing plants of various kinds, which give employment to over 3,000 men. This is not a bad showing for a town that is said to be "dead," but isn't "dead" by a large majority.
